ABLE SPEAKERS MAKE FIFTH DISTRICT COMMUNITY CON-FERENCE, IN SESSION HERE SUNDAY AND TODAY, ONE OF PROFIT TO THOSE IN ATTEND-ANCE—STATE INSTITUTION OFFICIALS SPEAK ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

CONFERENCE ENDS TONIGHT

Workers in charities and corrections n the Fifth Congressional District of time in Greencastle in attendance at has progressed rapidly and predicted the sessions of the community conference which opened Sunday afternoon and which will close tonight. Able speakers from different parts of the state who are interested in varied forms of community work are appearing on the program and their addresses are authoratative on the subjects which they discuss. Considering the sudden change in the weather, good crowds are attending the sessions, the one of Sunday night comfortably filling the College Avenue Methodist church. The session was a union meeting of the various churches the Presbyterian church. of the town.

Many Boys Defective.

The plans and purposes of three of Indiana's correctional institutions were explained on Sunday afternoon at the court house by representatives of each. H. B. Hickman, superintendent of the boy's school educa tional department of the Plainfield Reformatory, reviewed the work done in that institution during the past year. At present there are 545 boys at the school, he said, most of whom are between the ages of twelve and seventeen. Two hundred and thirtyfive boys have been received during the past year and, according to certain mental tests that are applied to them, about seventy per cent. are defective. The speaker deplored the conthat makes it necessary that these boys be sent to a correctional institution rather than to a place where they could be treated for their deficiency.

In closing his address, Dr. Gekler said that while much good is being done by the hospital, the state of Indiana can never hope to make headway against tuberrulosis until it #### adopts some preventative measures. Praises State Farm.

The Indiana State Farm was dis cussed by W. C. Ball, of Terre Haute, member of the board of trustees of the Putnam county institution. Mr. Ball reviewed the history of the establishment of the farm and told of what it is expected to accomplish in the way of correctional work. He approved of the plan of taking men out of jails and workhouses where they very likely were sent because of not working and placing them in an institution where they will be forced to work. The inclement weather conditions Sunday prevented the oil men from transferring the drill to the Miller farm and operations were delayed until today. The drill arrived in Bainbridge from Sullivan Saturday afternoon. The experts who will sink the wells moved the outfit to the Miller farm today and the work setting up the drill has started. Mr. Fenn stated today that the drill would be in place in a few days and the drilling will begin as soon as this work is completed. The casing for the first well and practically all the tools and apparatus were taken to the Miller farm Saturday

The site of the first well is considered the most favorable place for the oil flow by the experts who will drill in this county. It is in the intention of the oil men to drill on the sites where the striking of oil at a shallow depth is most probable.

The Miller farm shows many excellent indications of the presence of oil under the land. The arrival of the drill and the beginning of oil operations has caused much interest to be centered in the sinking of the first well. With the prospects very bright for a rich "find," the people of north Putnam are waiting with keen interest the result of the project. The exact spot where the first well will be sunk is 21/2 miles west of Bainthe Rockville road.

Work on the field will continue despite the cold weather and rain or snow are the only weather conditions thus benefited because many of them subject will be "The Place of the this morning to superintend the work which has begun of Corn Stalks. The writer found in 10 years of work at the Nebraska Experiment Station, prior to coming to Minnesota, that a ration of alfalfa hay with corn Said petitioners recommend that silage or stover gave larger and more said highway be improved to an estabother rations tested. Later tests have failed to show conclusively which is the better way of handling the corn, but it may be regarded as proved that the whole plant should be used instead of only the ear.

For the purpose of comparing silage Wherefore said petitioners ask that uch highway so asked to be improved groups, each containing eight steer alves, were fed from March 25 to Aug 15. 1911. Each animal of one group re pounds of alfalfa and 3.6 pounds of shredded corn stover. The animals of L. L. McGinnis, T. C. Utteroack, Mat Masten, Niles H. Martin, I. A. Hart-and received 6.1 pounds of corn, 3.4 man, A. V. McKamey, A. Farmer, H. pounds of alfalfa, and 15 pounds of corn silage. These two rations were practically dentical, except that the cornstalk was fed as silage in one case and as shredled stover in the other. The difference in amount of grain was made because in the silage.

The silage-fed calves made average taily gains of 1.8 pounds each, or about one-third of a pound more than the stover-fed animals, and required only 3.4 pounds of grain instead of five pounds for each pound of gain made They required less total dry matter, the figures being 7.8 and 8.9 pounds

Club Work for Boys and Girls

A fascinating branch of the Farm Management work of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is the club work for girls and boys. This department agents, many county agents in each state who endeavor to interest the boys in growing corn and pigs, and the girls in raising and canning the ordi nary kitchen garden products. It is a regrettable fact that so much of the farmer's time and acreage is consumed in large crops that, unless his over worked wife tries growing green vege tables, the family actually have none to eat. There is also great difficulty in getting the older generation to change its dietary habits. So Farn Management has begun work with the boys and girls, trying to get them to grow not only for exhibits and selling but for the family consumption. work has splendid educational possibilities, because these young and enthusiastic members of the family learn how to till their acre or tenth of an acre (the boys need more space for their corn), how to plant and tend their crops in the most approved fashion, and in the case of the girls, how to can their vegetables for winter use Many of the girls grow so much that they are able to market, at a con siderable profit, all that the family does not use.

Any public spirited woman in a subarban district who wants to start something a little different, to hold the juniors together, should consult the clubwork experts in this bureau on gardening and canning. At Takoma Park, one of the suburbs of Washing ton, the idea has taken hold splendidly and, in almost any space the ground permits, the boys and girls are learning to plant and grow a few common vegetables, and then to can them, as well as to supply the household when they are green. In the cities, where the gardening part is out of the ques tion, the children are taught to market conomically, and then the canning lessons are given. The work needs a leader who will keep the club in touch with the main office, who will undertake to direct and stimulate the children. But any mother who has encountered the dreariness of "What shall I do next?" with her growing boys and girls should find a satis factory and practical solution in getting up a garden and canning club. The country boys and girls who have been reached by this work are encouraged by prizes for their reports and exhibits, the most coveted prize being a trip to Washington. Any vol leader who started a club should find no difficulty in inducing other adults to offer prizes; in many communities the local boards of trade have been glad to stimulate buying and selling by this means, and in others banks and railroads come forward. The department itself does not offer prizes, but it does everything possible to help the club workers obtain them. One notewarthy feature of its advice about prize awards is the instruction on the business side of gardeners and marketing. The young gardeners are made to charge themselves with land, time, labor, and materials before they can count profits. As a result of this work with canning and preserving, there is an un-usual amount of printed matter dealing with the subject, available to any woman. Recipes and reliable directions are supplied. The office of Nutrition Investigations will also provide information on almost any subject which has to do with the preparation and care of food; how to arrange a proper diet, how to use meat econom ically, how to cook and utilize any un isual foot; bread making, eggs and their uses, fish, flour of various kinds, corn, poultry rabbits, and so or through a long category of the ordi nary elements of diet.—Suburban Life of the commissary department to pur-chase on the march. Every soldier in the field carries in his knapsack one day's rations for emergency use. These rations consist of 10 ounces of army biscuit, 10 ounces canned meat, 1 ounce condensed soup, 2 ounces coffee and 3 ounces sugar.

BLACKMAIL BY PIGEONS.

A Frenchman's Novel Plan to Get Money Without Risk.

PARIS.-An unknown man who atmpted to obtain money by blackmail from a Paris tradesman hit upon clever ruse for getting the hush money, it it should be forthcoming, without any risk of discovery.

He wrote to his victim, demanding $800 and told him to send the money by four carrier pigeons, which would reach him in the course of a day or so. After a brief interval four pigeons arrived, each in a separate cage, each having been delivered from a different railway station in

The tradesman's instructions were to the effect that he must attach a $200 note to one wing of each bird and liberate them at once. Instead of obeying this order the tradesman took the birds to the police, but there was no mark upon them by which their owner might be traced.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa.—George Kelley, aged 55, committed suicide by blowing of his head with dynamite. In the early part of the evening he left his home, and after becoming intoxicated purchased three sticks of dynamite and started for his house Upon arriving the he immediately went to the back yard and placed the dynamite upon the ground, at the same time attaching a two-foot to it. He then stretched himself flat upon his back on the grass, using the dynamite as a pillow for his head. Reaching over his shoulder, he managed to get the fuse lighted and then calmly waited for the end. His whole head was blown off. He was despondent over the death of his wife and excessive drinking.

SECRET RAIDS

Made on Dens Where Opium Cigar ettes Were Manufactured.

CHICAGO.—The invention by a Chinese chemist of an opium ciga-rette," the enactment of a Federal law making its manufacture or sale a felony, secret valds on dens where the new elgarette was being made, the indictment of seven Chinese and one white man, summarize a story revealed here.

The invention of the chemist was discovered several months ago and the law against it was passed. The chemist escaped, and plans which he had made to spread the opium habit lapsed until recently.

The raid was made several days ago in the greatest secrety, and the story came out in connection with the return of indictments.

It is claimed that marriage is a lottery, but it can not be true, else the law would take hold of it:

Daily Rations for Each French Soldier. PARIS.—Here is the daily bill of fare for the French private soldier in the field:

"Five dollars, sir. It is an ex-cellent weapon which will bring down a man at a distance of fifty yards."

Mr. Varin fingered the revolve gingerly and tried to appear calm though his wife's actions had filled him with such despair that his only thought was death.

He had married her because she was beautiful, although she did not posess a penny, and he had taken her to a comfortable home, where she soon felt bored to death, because she had nothing to do but lool pretty.

After a while she grew tired of her uninteresting, careless husband and eloped with a handsome young man of leisure, who filled her ears with all the pretty words she had longed to hear from the lips of her husband, who felt too secure of her to pay compliments to her, though he loved her as much as it was po sible for him to love any one.

Mr. Varin paid for the revolver hailed a cab and drove home, with the intention of ending his life in the rooms where every little thing reminded him of her.

Standing in front of the big mir ror in their bedroom, he pressed the cold muzzle of the revolver against his temple and shivered. He say the whole scene that was to followthe discovery of his body by the street outside the house filled with a curious crowd

Then he thought of his wife, to whom the news of his death would perhaps come as a relief, and resolved to live for revenge. His one aim would now be to catch the guilty couple and kill them both before giving himself up to the police. He saw himself the hero of a sensa tional trial ending with acquittal.

This prospect being far more al luring than suicide, he went to bed to dream of the dreadful punishment would inflict upon the two who had wrecked his happiness.

The next day-a cold, gray, cheer less morning in December-he got up, as usual, and sat down to eat his breakfast alone, before he went

Many long, monotonous days fol lowed this, but gradually he grey used to the loneliness and no longer understood his first excitement; but to his colleagues he still posed as the stern unforgiving husband who lived only in order to get revenge Furiously dipping his pen in the ink he said, time and time again, in a voice that trembled with indignation Some day I will catch the two, and then I will kill them, if I have to give up my own life to the gallow

The others tried to calm him, but he refused to listen to them: "Never, never will I forgive or forget. think too much of my honor for that!

After a while the others grev tired of his eruptions and did not appear to notice them at all; and, as for Varin himself, the whole affair had long ago ceased to interest him. When he was alone he surprised him self feeling happy at the thought of being a free man once more, and one night in July he slipped the still loaded revolver into his pocket, walked down to the river and sauntered along the drive.

It was a real summer day, light and hot, as such days are in New York. Women passed by, dressed in the lightest of gossamer gowns with low neck and short sleeves looking like flowers just breaking out of the buds. Mr. Varin looked at them threw his revolver into the river, and invited a charming young girl to Young Mr. Danby held a position in a city department. His standing in social life was good, and it was known that he had a fair-sized bank account. So far as friends or rem tives knew, he had never been in ove, and was not likely to be. Therefore it was a shock to his sister-inlaw when he arrived one Sunday and said:

"Look here, Sarah, you have got to help me out.

"What is it. Maurice?" she asked. "I'm in love."

"You can't be?"

"But I am. "Well, won't the girl have you?"

"I haven't asked her yet." "Then go right off and do it."

"Listen to me, woman. I came down by the old post road this morning, instead of the usual way. About hree miles above here is an old red farmhouse.

"Yes, the Granger place." "There was a girl there."

"Yes, Kittle Granger."

"She was leaning on the gate eat ng an apple. I am almost sure she smiled at me

"That's your vanity. She probably gave her whole attention to the apple. "Perhaps she did, but I'm in love with her and I am going to marry her, and I beg of you to help me bring it about.

"And make a fool of myself and a monkey of you? As I am the last comer it's her place to call on me first, and she hasn't done it. She probably will in time, though."

"Great Scots, but this is too in-

"Well, you'll have to work out your own salvation. We go by the rules of etiquette out here in the country the same as in the city, and you don't catch me transgressing the one rule, anyway!'

Maurice went out and strolled round for a couple of hours, and when he returned his sister-in-law saw a look on his face which brought the remark: "I think you have conquered your love."

Then there's another think com ng to you. I may prolong this call or a fortnight."

When he saw the old farmer at work in a field by the roadside an idea came to him. He stopped and began negotiating for a calf that was tied in the front yard, hoping in the meantime that Kitty, who was singing blithely in the house, would come out and he would get introduced to But she paid no attention to He said he would call for the calf next day, which he did, but still no acquaintance with Kitty.

When another day came, the desperate Mr. J'a by was ready—he didn't know or what. He set out without a place which is often the best way. If he passed the house he might be shouted to to stop and buy hogs or hens, but it might be his luck also to see Miss Kitty at the gate. He had just determined to take his chances when he saw her coming toward him, driving in her

His Democratic Instincts and Prac tices, Personal and Official, Have Greatly Endeared Him to the People-His Wife Also Popular.

LONDON .- The brilliant soldierly ecord of King Albert of the Belgians during the European war astonished the world no less than the bravery of the Belgian soldiers in defending Liege from the Germans. Neither the soldiers of Belgium nor their king had any particular reputation as warriors before the war. Germany did not anticipate such undaunted courage and stubborn re sistance as they gave her, and England and France did not expect that they would show themselves so capable in fighting

Belgium has belonged to the Bel glans only since 1830, when the peo ple carried out a successful revolu tion against Holland, by whom they been ruled.

King Albert does not belong to the Belgians by any bond of blood He is the grandson of the first king of the Belgians, a German prince from SaxeCoburg-Gotha, who was in vited to rule as Leopold I. His sov ereignty lasted for 34 years. The sovereignty of his son, Leopold II, lasted for 44 years. That of his grandson, King Albert, began only in 1909. Belgium has been prosperous and united under their rule Each sovereign identified himself thor oroughly with his subjects and gave his life to his adopted country so completely that the royal family of Belgium is considered by the Belgians themselves as Belgian.

All work on the sewer system has een discontinued indefinitely on account of the extremely cold weather. It is impossible for the laborers to work in the snow and cold and the The neighbors are on the average of completed during the remaining winter months. Several days ago a large force of men were laid off and the excavating machine has been taken to the west part of town where it will be stored for the winter. It is the expectation of the contractors to complete the work in the alley between Washington and Walnut streets this winter. Work in rock is the only labo that is possible during the cold weather and an effort will be made to ontinue this portion of the contract.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

> Aberchombie, N. D. Dec. 10, 1914.

Dear old friends:-Thinking some of my old friends would like to hear from me I thought Kokomo. A short musical program I would write a letter to the "Greeneastle Herald." I am now in the southwestern part of North Dakota on a farm in the Red River Valley in Richland county. The land here i a level plain for miles and the soil i as good as any in the United States It is called the clay mold or clay sub soil. The principal crops are wheat, oats, barley and flax but they are now beginning to raise some corn and timothy and clover does fine. Potatoes grow from two to three hundred bushels to the acre. The farms are mostly all large. There are no fences. contractors expect little work to be three miles apart. We have fine roads out here. Yours truly,

Red Cross Seals Helped Her to Get Well

She was real pretty, and so full of fun that the dimples were always showing in her round red cheeks. Her eyes were big and brown, and nut olored hair curled naturally in little

She was eighteen when we first met her, and so neat and attractive that one would think she belonged to the well-to-do class of working people but when we followed her to her home ne day we confronted startling facts.

The red in her cheeks was the flusn of unnatural inward fever, the high spirits were a pitiful antidote to pitiess conditions, and the big, brown eyes saw only squalor when they were not fixed upon a typewriting machine or closed persistently to any view but in imaginary bright one.

The room we entered was a general living space, used also as an eating, cooking and sleeping apartment There was but one bed, and Betty had to sleep in it with her mother. who was too weak to sit up. An open cuspidor sat where it would be onveniently near the bed, which placed it by the stove, where their food was cooked. The mother, who was suffering in an advanced stage of tuberculosis, did not like cold air, and keep the door and windows close "Well," said cheerful Betty, with augh, "that isn't so bad as not hav ng any windows or doors to close Things might be worse

"Infinitely worse," said the Wise One. "You might even take a notion to stuff the windows and doors with rags to cut out what oxygen comes in through the cracks."

Red Cross Christmas Seals, with their cheery message of hope, gave Betty a chance to get well after her mother died. Is it worth while to be the Bettys? Buy your share to-

Mary

Chilton

Tradition states that after a long and tedious voyage the Mayflower dropped anchor in Plymouth bay. A few days later the boat was lowered and the Pil-grims were carried to the shore. In the first boat was bright-eyed, light-hearted Mary Chilton, who in spite of the deprivations and inconveniences of the voyage had remained hopeful, bright and joyous. One thing worthy of notice is that eagerness to be first on the American strand prompted her, like a young heroine, to leap from the boat and wade ashore.

The "Mary Chilton" in sterling silver is suggestive of the simple grace and dignity of Colonial times and it is fitting that it should bear the name of the maiden to whom tradition has romantically, given the honor of being the first while woman to land on New England soil-MARY CHILTON.
